PROJECT

Title of the Project:

Collaboration among Multiple Cloud-Based Services Employing Proxies

Description:

Cloud computing involves a large number of computers connected through a communication network such as the Internet. Cloud computing is a synonym for distributed computing over a network, and means the ability to run a program or application on many connected computers at the same time. Cloud provides various types of services to users who are registered to it. Multi cloud system provides a mash up of several clouds to form a collection of cloud services. Multi-cloud systems provide various services offered on various clouds. These services which are present on different clouds require various agreements for the services to be accessed. In the project, proxies are used to access the services provided by other clouds, thus accessing various services more economically. Further, a proxy-based multi-cloud computing framework allows dynamic, on-the-fly collaborations and resource sharing among cloud-based services, addressing trust, policy, and private issues without pre-established collaboration agreements or standardized interfaces.

In the project, proxies are employed to act on behalf of the requested user and forward the request to the cloud which possesses the service. The proxies are transparent and act as the requested user and receive the service and provide it to the user. If necessary, the proxy can delegate more number of proxies to provide the requested service.
